Announcements for March 2

- At last weekend’s Ohio Celebration of Women in Computing (OCWIC) there was a poster exhibit for students to display research they have done. There were 4 awards given – two First Place prizes and two Honorable Mentions. Oberlin students took half of the awards – Christine Antonsen received one of the First Place awards and Samantha Mater received an Honorable Mention.

- There are 6 copies of our textbook on reserve in Mudd.

- The 2nd Annual CS Community Art Show will be in April. The art doesn’t need to be produced with any particular technology; it is just art by people in the CS community. The organizers are Paul Buser and Samantha Mater. Contact them if you have questions.

- We are having a CS talk at noon on Tuesday: Title: "I've Got Code: Where's the IP? What's it Worth?" The speaker is Michael Messinger, father of Oberlin student Kevin Messinger. This should be fun. There will be pizza for the audience, so you need to sign up in Room 223 if you plan to attend.

- At the Ohio College Programming Contest at Denison on Saturday Oberlin teams took 1st and 3rd places out of a total of 21 teams.

- We should have an exam next week. Wednesday or Friday?
